

Celebrating Hungarian Science 2021
"Science: a compass for a viable future."

A Joint Conference of the Specialized Committees of Linguistics and Literature, Regional Committee of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences and Faculty of Modern Philology and Social Sciences, University of Pannonia:

„Humanities: roads to the future”

The Hungarian Academy of Sciences organises the Hungarian Science Celebration event each year in November. The motto of the event in 2021 is "Science: a compass for a viable future". As an integral part of the national program series, the Faculty of Modern Philology and Social Sciences of the University of Pannonia organises the conference of “Humanities: roads to the future”. The conference is organized around this central idea, highlighting the future-shaping role of science. The presented papers will show how the new developments in the field of linguistics, literary and cultural sciences, educational and social sciences became future-shaping values. The central topic of the conference is the change of paradigms and approaches in these scientific disciplines which ensures the sustainable development and the continuous empirical research in these fields.

The scientific conference provides an insight into the future-shaping research carried out at the Faculty of Modern Philology and Social Sciences which is characterised by the interaction between different disciplines.

Date: November 8–9, 2021

Location: building B, 2nd floor, Conference Centre

Sections: 1) Linguistics, 2) Literature and Cultural Studies, 3) Social Sciences, 4) Pedagogy, 5) PhD student session

Languages of the conference: English, Hungarian, German

In the name of the organising committee:

Dr. habil. József Tóth, vice-dean

Veszprém, September 25, 2021